Election rivals come together

In a private meeting, Watson and O'Brien briefly discussed important issues including the budget, Lansdowne Park and light rail on Thursday ● Over the next month, Watson plans on spending more time with O'Brien and the city manager

▶ "He's offered some good advice in terms of some of the things that he has seen from his perspective over the last four years," mayor-elect Jim Watson, right, said of his meeting with Larry O'Brien Thursday.

It was an election well fought, but the mayor of Ottawa had some supportive words and friendly advice for mayor-elect Jim Watson Thursday.

"The best advice for Jim is for him to continue to be him," said Larry O'Brien.

"The city of Ottawa elected him, and I hope he takes his own counsel as being the most important counsel."

In a joint press conference Thursday, Watson said O'Brien has been supportive, offering his cellphone number and any advice he could.

"Transitions in government can be difficult, or they can be easy. Larry has offered great advice and time and he's going to make this transition very easy for me and I thank him very much for that."

Lost and found items go on sale

Portion from sale of items left on OC Transpo will be donated to Canadian Diabetes Association

JOE LOFARO
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

Bargain hunters will have a field day this Saturday at the OC Transpo unclaimed items sale as they rack up lost and found items for as little as 25 cents.

The Heartwood House is hosting its biannual sale of items that OC Transpo riders have left behind and have been unclaimed after the designated holding period. As buyers scoop up some great deals, the funds raised will be used here to support 16 charitable organizations.

"It becomes a win-win for everyone," said Heartwood House executive director Maureen Moloughney.

Sale

The sale runs from noon to 2 p.m. on Saturday at Heartwood House located on 153 Chapel St.

- Before items go on sale, there is a waiting period of 31 days for general items or three months for valuable items
- General items sell for between $0.25 and $5, while electronics and jewelry will be sold at a silent auction
- Some of the items on sale include skateboards, shoes, coffee mugs, sunglasses and strollers
- Volunteers expect about 500 people to line up as well as a few early birds who usually arrive as early as 8 a.m.

O'Brien: City in 'good hands'

The city will be in good hands with mayor-elect Jim Watson, Mayor Larry O'Brien said Thursday.

"Certainly from our office's perspective and my perspective, this city is going to be in great hands moving forward," O'Brien said. "(Ottawa is) certainly in a strong state financially. We have important, very difficult projects to manage going forward and I think mayor-elect Watson is going to have an awful lot of major activity on his desk that has been just started under my term as mayor.

"I have great faith that Jim will make the wise decisions that he believes are important for continuing on that path of improving the city."
OUTGOING MAYOR LARRY O'BRIEN

"I think mayor-elect Watson is very aware of the amount of energy and the amount of time that will take simply to make sure those programs stay on track."

New exhibits for Canada Hall

Exhibitions reveal the hopes and struggles shared by generations of immigrants

MIKE BEASLEY
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

Canada Hall at the Canadian Museum of Civilization has grown by another two exhibitions.

The museum added two important chapters in Canadian history to its largest and most popular permanent hall with the introduction of From Rebellions to Confederation, 1837-1867 and Toles School.

"The Canada Hall is our most popular exhibition with close to half a million visitors every year," said Dr. Victor Rabinovitch, president and chief executive officer of the Canadian Museum of Civilization Corporation.

"It is constantly evolving as we continue to layer in new information from our nation's history."

Rebellions to Confederation introduces visitors to the historical characters that led the 19th century rebels and patriots in confronting colonial powers in Upper Canada (Ontario) and Lower Canada (Quebec).

Proposals will boost study of Canada's North

Government of Canada launches competition to fund large-scale research of ecosystem

BEASLEY
OTTAWA@METRONEWS.CA

Expect to learn more about our country's changing North, thanks to a new research initiative launched by the Government of Canada.

Speaking at Carleton University on Thursday afternoon, Gary Goodyear, minster of state for science and technology, announced the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council Frontiers initiative.

"The Frontiers initiative will help address national research priorities and global challenges," said Goodyear.

"The Discovery initiative will increase our knowledge of Canada's northern ecosystem and support innovation that will benefit the northern economy."

Discovery research proposals will result in funding of up to $4 million over a five-year period to bolster the study of northern earth systems.

Innovation Frontiers will fund large-scale research projects that have the capacity to revolutionize existing fields.

Successful applicants in this field will receive a minimum of $1 million per year in funding for up to five years.

▶ Minister of Human Resources and Skills Development Diane Finley, right, and United Way president Michael Allen announce a renewed $45-million commitment to better serve Canadians with disabilities.

Cash marked for disability access

Organizations can apply for contributions of between $500,000 and $3 million

JOE LOFARO

Community organizations can now have their facilities retrofitted to be more accessible to those with disabilities with the support of a $45-million investment from the federal government.

Minister of Human Resources and Skills Development Diane Finley made the announcement at United Way Ottawa with president Michael Allen.

"Through the Enabling Accessibility Fund, the government of Canada is improving access to facilities, activities and services, and enabling all Canadians to participate fully in society," said Finley.

Organizations have until Jan. 13 to submit their applications to have mid-size projects funded by the grant to make facilities more accessible. The government had previously committed $45 million in 2008 and, "as a result, thousands of people have accessed the places they couldn't enter before," said Finley.

Two teens accused of spying executed

Two accused spies died amid a fusillade of bullets from a firing squad organized by a hardline Islamist militia.

The condemned pair were girls, aged 15 and 18.

Their grieving relatives say they were uneducated, usually stayed at home and could not have spied for anyone.

Horrified residents of Belet Weyne, in western Somalia, were forced to watch the execution by al-Shabab on Wednesday.

A woman fainted as the girls were gunned down. "Those who watched ... could not bear the painful experience. Two young girls were shot as they watched and no one could help," said Dahir Casowe, a local elder.

Al-Shabab is linked to al-Qaida and has carried out amputations and executions to enforce its strict interpretation of Islam.

Growth in health-care spending slowing: CIHI

Health-care spending in Canada this year is predicted to reach almost $192 billion, up five per cent over 2009, says the Canadian Institute for Health Information.

Its 155-page report, released Thursday, says that figure translates into about $5,600 for each man, woman and child.

"Over the last 10 years, we've seen the growth in health-care spending over and above population growth and inflation," said Chris Kuchciak, a CIHI manager.

"However, what's different this year is that the growth rate in 2009 and 2010 seems to be decelerating." THE CANADIAN PRESS

PROTESTS

French strikes fail to draw numbers of people as they did previously Demonstrations by train and oil workers tapering off

Strikes caused hassles for air travellers in France on Thursday, but nationwide street protests over a plan to raise the retirement age to 62 failed to draw the massive crowds of weeks' past — a sign of slackening resolve among the bill's opponents.

Parliament has already approved raising the retirement age from 60 to 62, but union leaders insist they will not give up their fight until conservative President Nicolas Sarkozy actually signs the bill. Still, fewer protesters followed them into the streets this time, and strikes by train and oil workers have been tapering off in recent days.

In Paris, demonstrators waved union flags and set off flares, while in southern Marseille, they beat drums and blew whistles. Past demonstrations have drawn more than a million protesters into the streets: This time, the Interior Ministry put the figure at 560,000 nationwide. The hard-line CGT union contested that number, putting turnout at 2 million.

"We will fight until the end."
SOCIALIST LEADER MARTINE AUBRY

"It's true you could say the anti-reform movement is slowing down, but you need to ask why," Serba Germain, a 67-year-old retired police officer marching in Marseille, told Associated Press Television News.

"People are disappointed, they are frustrated" because the government hasn't listened.

Unions and opposition parties urged Sarkozy not to sign the law, which polls show is unpopular. He is expected to do so by mid-November, after it is cleared by France's constitutional watchdog.

But Sarkozy has refused to back down, even amid two weeks of strikes that cancelled trains, shut down oil refineries and left drivers struggling to find gasoline.

A small number of trains were cancelled Thursday, but the problem was bigger for airlines. A third of flights at Paris' Charles de Gaulle airport and half of those at the city's smaller Orly were cancelled. Flights were expected to run as normal Friday.

More students in university, but paying more

Rise in enrolment ranged from 0.7% in N.L. to 4.5% in B.C. Grads more likely to land knowledge-based jobs

Rising enrolment rates at Canadian universities were hailed Thursday as a future boon to the Canadian economy, but student advocates warned skyrocketing tuition is putting post-secondary education out of reach for many students.

Overall university enrolment increased 3.7 per cent over last year and 57 per cent from 1995, the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada reported. There were 898,000 full-time university students registered this fall.

That's good news for the economy, because university graduates represent about a quarter of the working population but are about 40 per cent of the tax base, said association president Paul Davidson.

"To be able to afford the quality of life, the standard of living, the quality of public services that we have in Canada, requires these kind of high-quality jobs that university graduates are getting," Davidson said.

University graduates increase Canada's productivity and innovation, said Davidson. They also make more money.

"Over a lifetime you can expect to earn $1.5 million more if you have a university degree than if you just finished high school," he said.

Over the last 20 years, about 87 per cent of the new professional and management positions created were filled by university graduates while jobs for high school graduates disappeared, the report said.

Separatists try to curtail infighting

Duceppe downplays talk of a rift Bloc Québécois leader said he and Marois worked well together

Quebec's sovereignty movement worked to avoid a family feud Thursday, one involving powerful personalities and clashing visions about how to work toward independence.

Parti Québécois Leader Pauline Marois — who is ostensibly the leading figure in the movement — found herself defending her performance and strategic approach.

She was reacting to eyebrow-raising remarks from a perhaps even more powerful figure within her party.

In a lengthy television interview this week (this 15th anniversary of the last Quebec referendum), ex-premier Jacques Parizeau didn't once mention the current PQ leader.

But he did applaud Bloc Québécois Leader Gilles Duceppe as the sovereignty movement's best spokesperson.

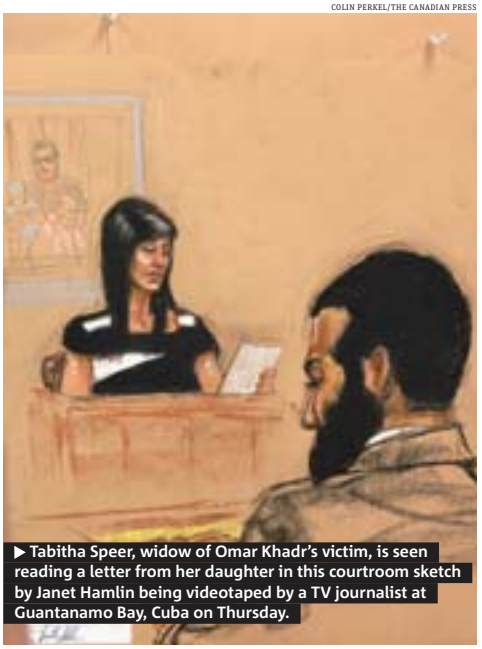
Khadr apologizes for U.S. soldier's killing

COLIN PERKEL/THE CANADIAN PRESS



▶ Tabitha Speer, widow of Omar Khadr's victim, is seen reading a letter from her daughter in this courtroom sketch by Janet Hamlin being videotaped by a TV journalist at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba on Thursday.

Notes on the proposed transfer to Canadian custody are to be released

Convicted Canadian war criminal Omar Khadr stood in a Guantanamo Bay courtroom Thursday and apologized directly to the widow of the American soldier he killed eight years ago.

Taking the stand to deliver an unsworn statement, Khadr also said his greatest wish was to get out of prison and one day become a doctor.

"I'm really, really sorry for the pain I caused you and your family," Khadr told Tabitha Speer, who hours earlier branded him a murderer.

"I wish I could do something that would take this pain away from you."

Speer initially shook her head as he spoke, and then wept.

Khadr told his Pentagon-appointed lawyer, Col. Jon Jackson, that he had decided to plead guilty to war crimes "to take responsibility for the acts I've done."

Khadr's lawyers have said a deal was struck this week that would see him return to Canada after serving up to another year in U.S. custody.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Statement

Citing South African President Nelson Mandela, Khadr said he had learned that in prison he had much time to think about things. As a result, he said, he had concluded there was no point carrying anger or hate in his heart.

Wisdom Teeth, Who Needs Them?

Wisdom teeth certainly don't make you any smarter... and while not everyone has problems with their wisdom teeth, they can cause problems for some people which can only be resolved by removal.

By the time most people reach their late teens or early twenties, they will have thirty-two teeth developed in their jaws. There are sixteen upper teeth and sixteen lower teeth. Each tooth has a specific name and function. The teeth in the front of the mouth are ideal for biting and grasping food. These teeth are the incisors, canines and bicuspids. The teeth in the back of the mouth are called molars. They are used for grinding and crushing food into smaller pieces which facilitates swallowing.

Wisdom teeth (or third molars, which usually have two or three roots) are the last teeth to form and move into the mouth. There are usually four wisdom teeth, one in the upper and lower arch on each side of the mouth. Healthy wisdom teeth that are correctly positioned can be a valuable asset. Unfortunately, that's not always the case.

Wisdom teeth can become a problem as they develop in each corner of the mouth. If the tooth travels in the wrong direction, if it's progress is blocked by another tooth, or if it becomes stuck in the dense bone structures of the jaw, the tooth may become impacted. They are also the teeth farthest back in the mouth and thus may be the most difficult to clean, even if they erupt into the proper position.

Impacted wisdom teeth can result in poor position, crowding, infection, decay of adjacent teeth, and even gum disease. Since development of your wisdom teeth normally takes several years, problems can occur gradually. Nevertheless, these gradual changes can cause sudden and severe pain. A person may visit the dentist because of pain in the back of the jaws. Removal of the offending impacted tooth (or teeth) usually resolves the problem. The wisdom tooth itself may be the source of the pain, or there may be an infection associated with it.

Understanding why such discomfort can occur may help you to deal with the problems, or better still, encourage you to take preventative measures before they occur. The primary preventive measure for wisdom teeth is removal, preferably at an early stage. The younger a person is, the less root development that has occurred, the easier the surgical removal of the wisdom tooth may be.

Since it's not practical for most people to evaluate how their wisdom teeth are developing (or have developed), the best approach is to visit the dentist for a professional evaluation.

Every case is different, and only the dentist can determine if there is a reason to have a wisdom tooth removed. The dentist will review your dental history, take appropriate dental x-rays, and perform an examination to determine both the condition of your wisdom teeth and the general health of your mouth.

Yours for better dental health,

Dr. David J. Halpin

IF YOU DON'T KNOW, PLEASE DON'T VOTE

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

Crucial mid-term elections will take place next Tuesday in the United States. The Republicans could regain political control in Washington and block Obama's projects.

Bryan Caplan, economics professor at George Mason University, has some advice for the millions of voters who plan to cast ballots on election day: If you don't understand basic economics, why not just stay home?

In his book, The Myth Of The Rational Voter, Caplan says it's wrong to think that politicians don't listen to the people. On the contrary, politicians do listen … and that's the problem! Voters are riddled with biases, according to Caplan. Especially when it comes to the economy.

Several polls carried out in the U.S. have revealed that half of voters don't know the name of their senator or representative. A good portion of the population thinks that foreign aid represents 24 per cent of the federal budget. (The correct answer: One per cent.)

"Many people have backward ideas about economics, having never studied the subject. And their opinions are generally the opposite of what an economics course would teach," Caplan once told me when I interviewed him for a business magazine. For example, people who have not studied economics usually think protectionism is a good thing. "Instead of saying, 'I don't know, I never studied that,' they state with conviction: 'Foreigners are stealing our jobs! We have to do something, regardless of what economists say!'"

The average voter exhibits numerous biases in economic matters, according to Caplan's research. Among other things, people tend to underestimate the advantages of market mechanisms, or the benefits of immigration and free trade. They also like to blame scapegoats for economic problems — speculators, oil companies, Wal-Mart, the Chinese …

The end result: In order to cater to voters, politicians enact laws that persecute those scapegoats, or erect protectionist barriers (taxes and tariffs) to limit free trade. Policies that, according to Caplan, impoverish the economy as a whole. The professor, who does not shy away from controversy, is consistent with his recommendations: Encouraging people to vote is a bad idea, he says.

"Among other things, people tend to underestimate the advantages of market mechanisms, or the benefits of immigration and free trade."

"Those who abstain from voting are, on average, less educated and less informed. If all of those people voted, the average voter would be even more ignorant of economic matters." Politicians would adjust their electoral platforms to cater to those voters, proposing even worse policies. "If you think politicians currently aim for the lowest common denominator among voters, you ain't seen nothing yet. That denominator can get even lower!"

Voting is a civic duty, they say. But for some, could the opposite be true?

Wireless industry complaints up

- Billing errors, contract disputes among gripes
- Bell, Telus and Rogers got most of the complaints

The fast-growing and competitive wireless industry is getting a lot of heat from consumers, who have increasingly turned to a government watchdog about problems with their service providers.

Although there has been a big increase in the number of wireless carriers in the market this year, the three established wireless carriers — Bell, Telus and Rogers — got almost all of the wireless complaints tallied in the 2009-10 report.

Canada's Commissioner for Complaints for Telecommunications Services reported Thursday that wireless carriers were the target of 52 per cent of the 3,700 complaints it received in the 2009-2010 monitoring period.

It was the first time that the wireless sector accounted for more than half of the complaints recorded by the agency.

Why live in pain?

CANADIAN PAIN CLINICS NOW ACCEPTING NEW PATIENTS

A MULTIMODAL APPROACH TO PAIN RELIEF

A highly regarded and successful clinic for the treatments of acute and chronic neuromuscular complaints, the Canadian Pain Clinics, is continuing to help people around the Ottawa area. This integrative treatment facility is attaining results from their multidisciplinary approach and the success rate has been high in these clinics. The clinic's unique treatment approach uses a combination of manual treatments, rehabilitative exercises, technologically advanced laser therapy and other state of the art modalities that results in adhesion free muscles, improved nerve function, increase mobility and reduced pain.

THE GRASTON TECHNIQUE

At the core of these treatments is the Graston technique. It is a soft tissue technique that is designed to mobilize, reduce and reorganize the fibrotic restrictions in the neuro-musculoskeletal system. The technique is delivered through the use of six hand held stainless steel instruments. A specifically designed ointment is applied to the skin prior to using the instruments so that the instruments glide over the skin without causing irritation. The treatment is applied in multiple directions: with venous drainage, against venous drainage and cross fibre in multiple directions to the lesion. The treatment application is also part of the diagnostic process. As the instruments are applied, a "vibratory" sensation is felt through the instruments to the doctor's fingertips. The patient simultaneously experiences a similar feeling while the tool traverses the area being treated. The Graston Technique Instruments are used to enhance the clinician's ability to detect adhesions, scar tissue or restrictions in the affected areas. Skilled clinicians use the stainless steel instruments to comb over and "catch" on fibrotic tissue, which immediately identifies the areas of restriction.

PAIN: HOW IS IT TREATED?

Patients suffering from acute and chronic pain conditions often have seen different doctors, practitioners, and have undergone many different therapies. They suffer from physical pain, and they also have a chemical and psychological component to their pain, which are often overlooked by other pain-relief facilities.

Pain relief and restoration of functioning are attained for such conditions as: neck pain, upper and lower back pain, headaches, carpal tunnel syndrome, frozen shoulder, thoracic outlet syndrome (numbness and tingling of the arm and hand), tendonitis (tennis and golfers elbow), plantar fasciitis (pain on the bottom of the foot), sports injuries, whiplash, sciatica (pain in the buttock and back of the leg), arthritis, torticollis (wry neck), fibromyalgia, spinal stenosis, acute sprain and strain injuries as well as the soft tissue component of almost any condition involving muscles, tendons, nerves and joints.

Many patients deemed as potential surgical candidates have also avoided or prolonged the need for surgery with the treatment approach the clinic uses. The reality is that most people wait too long and their conditions worsen leading to increased suffering from pain.

▶ Dr. Kimberly Stratton

5 MINUTES WITH: KIMBERLY STRATTON

Dr. Kimberly Stratton teaches the history of Satan course at Carleton University.

Where did the idea for the course come from?
After seeing the Passion Of The Christ, amidst all the discussions about the anti-Semitism of the film, the gratuitous violence of the film, I noticed Satan. I thought here they're using a female actor to portray a male character, and I thought, what does portraying Satan in this androgynous, almost homoerotic way, say about homosexuality? Knowing that Mel Gibson's particularly conservative I thought this was probably deliberate, and started thinking about how Satan is portrayed in other films, and what that might say about the agenda or ideology of the different directors or the period of time in which they were done.

Do people get the wrong idea about your course?
I've gotten a number of emails that are hand-wringing and deeply worried that my course might encourage students to not believe in Satan, and that Satan is really real and a couple of people have sent me their experiences of satanic attacks. One woman was in the Salvation Army. I invited her in, so she came to class and brought me a Bible and some literature on Satanists. So there are people who really still believe in Satan.

Have you ever spoken to a Satanist?
No, I never have. I've never actually met a Satanist. I've read that there are groups that proclaim to be Satanists, and it's not always clear. Sometimes it seems that it's just a backlash against Christianity. They're not really worshipping Satan, they're just sort of inverting Christian symbols.

What are some of your favourite essays students have turned in?
I had a student last year who did a paper on Satan in heavy metal music. Black Sabbath, for example, said it was just a shtick to sell their records, they're not Satanists, they don't believe in Satan at all. I had another one on music as well focusing more on the tradition of Satan in classical music and blues. You have the same tradition there of virtuosos selling their souls to the devil to acquire their skills, so it's a long tradition, it's not just a modern one. Almost all the papers actually have been very, very good. There was one that was very good looking at the witch trials and witchcraft, focusing on Quebec and the New World.

Re: What do you do when joke's on you? (Oct 28)

TORONTO. The article by Mr. Mazerolle contains some significantly offensive remarks. In particular, he likens feelings, when he failed to succeed as a standup comic, to "something akin to a kid who drops his ice cream combined with those Palestinian women you see mourning on television."

This remark is offensive on many levels, but in particular it is demeaning and dismissive of women suffering the loss of loved ones during a war. The referral to the "Palestinian women" in this context implies that they, and their grief, are somehow lesser, and mocks their reactions to their losses. I doubt Mr. Mazerolle would have made a similar reference to mourning Canadian women. His use of the grief of these women in this context serves to dehumanize them and is certainly not funny.

The use of the reference to the Palestinian women in conjunction with a dropped ice cream cone is a further degradation to the plight of these women, which should be considered separately from their context in the political arena in the Middle East. MALERIE ROSE

James Franco takes on the real-life survival story of Aron Ralston in 127 Hours

METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

Playing a hiker with his arm pinned under a boulder for five days brought its own set of challenges for James Franco, who stars as Aron Ralston in Danny Boyle's true-life 127 Hours. The first thing he had to worry about, though, was his waistline.

"He told me I should go on a diet," Franco says of his first meeting with the director. "First of all, Aron was in great shape, but also he lost 40 pounds while he was there, from water deprivation mostly."

Of course, recreated a rapid weight loss during the film's production wasn't feasible, so Franco shed as much weight as he could before filming, then relied on some helpful tools to bulk back up when needed.

"We actually even built this prosthetic that we ended up unfortunately calling 'the plumper,'" he says. "It was just this mouthpiece that would plump my cheeks out for the early parts of the film, and then as he started deteriorating we could use smaller and smaller versions until we didn't use any."

One useful tool for capturing Ralston's ordeal was the extensive video diary he kept.

"When we watched the real videos, one of the more powerful things about them is how simple it was and how direct and connected it was," Franco remembers.

"Some of the video messages are verbatim what he actually said," Franco says.

However, as an actor, he wasn't interested in just regurgitating Ralston's words.

"Our whole kind of approach — not just for the video messages but in general — was that we would honour Aron's story and we would do everything that he did, but also we wanted to kind of have our own approach to the story," he explains.

"And so with the video messages, they were scripted, but I felt like Danny gave me the freedom to be just a little loose with the words. But every once in a while there'd be a line in there and I'd say to myself, 'I just won't say that because it's kind of stupid.' And then Danny would come to me and say, 'Well, actually, for whatever reason, Aron is insistent that you say those two words.'"

127 Hours not typical acting role for Franco

James Franco is the first to admit 127 Hours isn't your typical film, since it wasn't his typical acting job, either.

"There were a lot of things that were unusual," he says. "I mean, you don't usually spend most movies with an armed pinned behind a boulder. But then you also don't spend most movies alone or without other actors. So all of that took adjusting."

Franco has been making a lot of adjustments lately, choosing career moves that have surprised onlookers — including his recent stint on General Hospital and his return to school. But he claims he's not in a "why not?" phase of his career.

A Millenium let down

The Girl Who Kicked The Hornets Nest
Genre: Drama
Director: Daniel Alfredson
Stars: Noomi Rapace, Michael Nyqvist, Lena Endre

The cinematic adaptation of Stieg Larsson's Millennium Trilogy kicked off with a bang thanks to The Girl With The Dragon Tattoo, which was excellent. Sadly, it ends on a whimper with this disappointing movie.

While the first film offered delightfully trashy sex-fueled intrigue, the sequels have gone for an irritating mix of ill-conceived action movie theatrics and endless exposition. This 2.5 hour conclusion is primarily dedicated to characters explaining the plot of the previous two movies and somehow the story arc of the series still doesn't quite make sense – and that's a difficult feat.

Lead actors Noomi Rapace and Michael Nyqvist are still compelling screen presences portraying intriguing characters, but even they are drowned out by all the exposition. The actors seem bored by the material this time and understandably so; audiences will likely feel the same way.

The original I Spit On Your Grave was hardly a masterpiece, but at least director Meir Zarchi had a point behind his exploitation. The remake attempts to show the horrors of rape and bittersweet futility of revenge with a script so clumsily written that it's impossible to take seriously. The film exists purely for shock value, and its thrills are empty and lacking any sense of horror-movie fun. ● PHIL BROWN

You cannot deny that Conviction is a compelling tale. Based on the true story of Betty Anne Waters, a Massachusetts woman who believed so strongly her incarcerated brother was innocent of murder, that she became a lawyer with the sole purpose of freeing her sibling – that's pretty impressive. However, beyond their performances, Conviction rarely rises above the level of an impressive Law & Order episode. ● STEVE GOW

Ferrell gets animated

- Former SNL star takes on role of an inept evildoer
- Actor enjoyed freedom he had with character

STEVE GOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Will Ferrell is such a humble guy that when he's asked what it's like to lead a big animated comedy like Megamind, the affable actor quickly diverts the attention.

"I don't really consider myself front and centre of this fine cast," said Ferrell before noticing a giant banner over his shoulder clearly focusing on the titular character. "So I guess I am front and centre."

Indeed he is. Ferrell is the voice of Megamind, a blue-skinned supervillain that suddenly defeats his nemesis and finds himself in the unlikely role of public defender.

It may be his second animated feature (after Curious George), but the movie does mark a first for the funnyman.

"It's the first time (my kids) have commented on something I've been in," laughed Ferrell admitting his children didn't necessarily affect his choice in the role.

"This was just kind of a decision based pretty much on wanting to try and do another animated movie and getting the chance to work with (director) Tom (McGrath) so my children were not consulted — nor are they ever consulted about anything. It's a very strict household."

Kidding aside, its obvious Ferrell had fun conjuring up the voice of an inept big-headed evildoer that hilariously mispronounces words like "school" — the result of much improvisation in the recording studio.

"There is a great amount of freedom in terms of getting to come up with stuff on the spot," said Ferrell, who has considerable re spect for the art. "What's lost on the project is how hard it is to articulate any emotional gearshift just with your voice. Playing the comedy is one thing but I think there's a real skill for any of these actors that can effectively do that consistently."

A Saturday matinee screening of last year's Paranormal Activity was the first and only time I have ever heard anyone actually scream in a theatre. I don't mean a quiet whimper followed by an embarrassed laugh or a frightened little squeal. No, I mean a full-on, open throated howl of terror.

The release of Paranormal's prequel last weekend got me thinking about other big screen scream worthy scenes. So just in time for Halloween are some leave-the-lights-on movie moments.

If Alfred Hitchcock had any doubts about the effectiveness of the shower sequence in Psycho they must have been put to bed when he received an angry letter from the father whose daughter stopped bathing after seeing the bathtub murder scene in Les Diaboliques and then, more distressingly, refused to shower after seeing Psycho. Hitch's response to the concerned dad? "Send her to the dry cleaners."

The shower scene was terrifying but at least it was allowed to stay in the movie. In 1931 Frankenstein star Boris Karloff demanded the scene in the movie where the monster plays with a little girl, throwing flowers in a pond be cut from the picture. It's a cute scene until the beast runs out of flowers and tosses the little girl into the water, leaving her to drown. Karloff, and audiences, objected to the violence against the youngster and the scene was shortened, then removed altogether and remained unseen until a special videotape release 48 years later. More recently The Exorcist (now beautifully restored on Blu Ray) so traumatized audiences with shots of the possessed Regan MacNeil's 360-degrees head spinning that in the U.K. the St. John's Ambulance Brigade were on-call at screenings to tend to fainters.

Scary scenes one and all, but recounting them begs the question, why are we drawn to them? The quick answer comes from Alfred Hitchcock who said, "People like to be scared when they feel safe."

What is Tuesday's?

Tuesday's is an adult Romance store with a boutique like environment and a focus on informative customer service. We carry top line products such as Kama Sutra, Lelo, Tantus, jimmyjane and of course the We-Vibe. Our intention was to create an environment where men and women could feel more comfortable while shopping for items to enhance their romance. So come see us this Holiday season for romantic gifts to heat up those cold winter nights.

What is Romance Day?

Today all of us are time poor so a Romance Day is any day of the week that you manage to spend time with the one you love and doing things together. These things can be very simple like staying home to watch a movie, getting dressed up for each other and going out to a romantic dinner or just a walk along the Ottawa River. Romance is about making time to share with the one you love. By connecting or re-connecting in this way you strengthen your relationship. So what day is your Romance Day going to be ?

Has Justin been cheating ?

His rep says no, but a source says Timberlake and Biel are history

Justin Timberlake reportedly cheated on Jessica Biel with The Daily Show correspondent Olivia Munn after convincing Munn his relationship with Biel was actually over, sources tell Us Weekly.

Munn had reportedly spurned his advances, but Timberlake "has been telling people it's over with Jessica, even though the reality is he's just doing it behind her back," the source says, adding that he was convincing enough for Munn to invite him back to her hotel room, where the two celebrities "were openly affectionate."

Timberlake's rep denies the story. METRO

Pasta problems? We got you covered

LARRY CROWE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ The bowtie shape of farfalle pasta helps carry plenty of sauce as well as the pieces of meat to your mouth.

How to cook, dress and eat every pasta in every shape

Chances are you know linguine goes with clam sauce and fettuccine loves Alfredo. But which pasta pairs with pesto? Or a hefty carbonara?

"Pasta has evolved over many hundreds of years in Italy and it's taken a long time for them to work out what tastes best," says British chef Jacob Kenedy, co-author with graphic designer Caz Hildebrand of The Geometry of Pasta. Together they are advocates of a simple truth: Pasta and sauce, correctly paired, yield a sublime experience.

They had plenty of material to work with. More than 300 shapes of pasta exist, each with a specific texture and strategy for delivering flavours.

In general, lighter sauces pair well with thin pastas. Oily, punchy sauces go with thicker pastas. Sauce will cling to a rough-textured pasta, such as a ridged penne, Kenedy says, while a smoother one like spaghetti will create a more delicate dish. Short tubes and cup shapes are good for "sauces with bits in them," Kenedy says, such as those with diced meat or vegetables.

"More intricate shapes are quite fun to play with," he says. "It's like when you're a little kid and you put things in your mouth."

Which doesn't mean you need to fill your cupboard with dozens of different pastas. But at least make room for a few new ideas.

"It's a shame not to feel encouraged to try some of these amazing shapes," says Hildebrand.

Ingredients :

- 250 g (1/2 lb) farfalle pasta
- 75 ml (5 tbsp) heavy cream
- 50 g (1 3/4 oz) prosciutto, sliced into 1-cm (1/2-inch) strips
- Generous 125 ml (1/2 cup) grated Parmesan, plus extra to serve
- 2 egg yolks
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

Farfalle With Prosciutto and Cream

Preparation:

1. Bring a large saucepan of salted water to a boil. Cook pasta to al dente (still barely firm at the centre) according to package directions.
2. While pasta cooks, in a large bowl, combine cream, prosciutto, Parmesan and egg yolks. Season with salt and pepper.
3. Drain farfalle and toss into sauce. Serve with extra cheese. Makes 4 servings.

Elliott stops 28 shots as Senators defeat Panthers Thursday night

PAWEL DWULIT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

▶ Florida Panthers Stephen Weiss drives the net Thursday as Sens goaltender Brian Elliott tries to make the save.

Brian Elliott made 28 saves to help the Ottawa Senators earn their second straight win, a 5-3 victory over the Florida Panthers Thursday night.

Ottawa (4-5-1) scored five straight goals to get its first back-to-back victories of the season. The Senators beat Phoenix by the same score two nights earlier.

Milan Michalek, Mike Fisher, Zach Smith, Alex Kovalev and Daniel Alfredsson scored for the Senators, while Elliott improved his record to 4-3-0.

Bryan McCabe, Chris Higgins and Mike Santorelli scored for the Panthers (3-5-0), who have lost their last two.

SENATORS	PANTHERS

Despite playing much of the first period in the Panthers' end, the Senators found themselves trailing 1-0 after the first period on McCabe's power-play goal midway through the period.

Michalek picked up his fourth of the season as he and Chris Kelly broke in shorthanded on a 2-on-1 and Vokoun, who faced 28 shots, was unable to get across in time after anticipating the shot from Kelly.

The Senators took the lead for good midway through the second period as Fisher was left all alone to pick up Sergei Gonchar's rebound.

A little more than a minute later Smith picked up his first of the season as he caught Vokoun cheating against the post and slipped it behind the goalie.

The Senators took control of the game scoring two goals early in the third period.

Kovalev, with his third in two games, got a little help from Vokoun who tipped the shot in with his stick as he attempted to deflect it.

A little more than two minutes later a turnover at centre ice allowed Fisher to feed Alfredsson, who skated into the high slot and beat Vokoun with a wrist shot.

The Panthers made it interesting with goals by Higgins and Santorelli, but Florida ran out of time to complete a comeback.

The Senators wrap up their three-game homestand Saturday night as they host the Boston Bruins.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 You may not much like what you are expected to do today but do it anyway and do it with passion and commitment.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 Don't take it personally if a friend or work colleague disagrees with you loudly today. Usually you are pretty robust but the Sun in your opposite sign lowers your resistance to criticism. It's not worth starting a fight over.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Others can make light of your achievements if they so wish but you know what you have done and how much it is worth. Chances are they're jealous that you make it all look so easy. Make them even more jealous today.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Life moves in cycles and the cycle you are now in the middle of is positive in the extreme. Having said that, with values planet Venus moving retrograde you cannot afford to take anything for granted.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You may not be much in the mood for taking action but the planets indicate this is a good time to push through changes of a personal nature.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Interesting information will come your way today, the kind of information that could be worth a lot of money. Keep what you learn to yourself for the time being. The fewer know about it the larger your profit will be.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 The planets indicate that in a matter of days your viewpoint will improve dramatically and you won't feel so down in the dumps. The world is always as good (or as bad) as you want it to be.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 The Sun close to Venus in your birth sign is an excellent omen for affairs of the heart and anything related to money and property.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Your imagination is working overtime at the moment and some of the creative ideas you've come up with are bordering on genius. But what are you going to do with those ideas?

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Make the most of the good things that come your way — of which there will be plenty over the next few days. Friends are an excellent source of luck at the moment, so meet up with them.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 When you look back many years from now will you be pleased with yourself that you took so many chances? Or will you rue the opportunities you allowed to pass by?

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Today's Sun-Venus union in your fellow Water sign of Scorpio encourages you to see the world from a higher perspective. Feed your mind, and your soul will soar. SALLY BROMPTON
